Why It Matters

As you study Unit 5, you will learn how growth, migration, and conflict increased following the Industrial Revolution. The following resources offer more information about this period in American history.

Primary Sources Library

See pages 600–601 for primary source readings to accompany Unit 5.

Use the American History Primary Source Document Library CD-ROM to find additional primary sources about the developing nation.

Advice on the Prairie by William T. Ranney
“Liberty and Union, now and forever. . . .”

—Daniel Webster, 1830
Why It Matters
The struggle for political rights took shape in the 1820s and 1830s, when many people questioned the limits of American democracy.

The Impact Today
In the years since the Jackson era:
• Women, African Americans, and other minorities have won the right to vote and to participate in the political process.
• Today every United States citizen aged 18 or older, regardless of gender, race, or wealth, has the right to vote.

The American Republic to 1877 Video The chapter 11 video, “Old Hickory,” chronicles events in Andrew Jackson’s military and political careers.

1833 – Force Bill passed

1829
• Louis Braille publishes reading system for the blind

1829
• Slavery abolished in British colonies

1826
• French scientist Niépce produces first photograph

1826
• Brazil gains independence from Portugal

1823
• President Monroe outlines Monroe Doctrine

1823
• Indian Removal Act passed

1823
• Webster-Hayne debate

1820
1825
1830

1817–1825

1829–1837

1817–1825
Stump Speaking by George Caleb Bingham  Bingham’s series of election paintings expressed faith in the growth of democracy.

1834  •  Indian Territory created by Congress

1837  •  Panic of 1837

Van Buren 1837–1841

1838  •  Cherokee forced to move west

1840  •  Harrison elected president

H. W. Harrison 1841

Tyler 1841–1845

1839  •  Scottish blacksmith, Kirkpatrick Macmillian, produces first bicycle

1843  •  Charles Dickens writes “A Christmas Carol”

1845  •  Deadly fungus destroys much of Ireland’s potato crop

Evaluation of Information Study Foldable
Make this foldable to help you ask and answer questions about the Jackson era.

Step 1  Fold a sheet of paper in half from side to side, leaving a ¼ inch tab along the side.

Step 2  Turn the paper and fold it into fourths.

Step 3  Unfold and cut up along the three fold lines.

Step 4  Label your foldable as shown.

Reading and Writing  As you read, ask yourself “who” Andrew Jackson was, “what” he did, “when” he did it, and “why” it happened. Write your thoughts and facts under each appropriate tab.

Chapter Overview
Visit tarvo11.glencoe.com and click on Chapter 11—Chapter Overviews to preview chapter information.
The presidential campaign of 1828 was one of the most vicious in American history. Supporters of John Quincy Adams in Philadelphia distributed a pamphlet titled “Some Account of Some of the Bloody Deeds of General Jackson.” One illustration in the pamphlet showed a ferocious-looking Andrew Jackson plunging his sword through the body of a helpless civilian. Meanwhile Jackson’s supporters falsely accused John Quincy Adams of kidnapping a young American girl and selling her to the ruler of Russia.

The Election of 1824

From 1816 to 1824, the United States had only one political party, the Jeffersonian Republicans. Within the party, however, differences arose among various groups that had their own views and interests. In 1824 James Monroe was finishing his second term as president but declined to run for a third term. Four candidates from the Republican Party competed for the presidency.
The four candidates’ opinions differed on the role of the federal government. They also spoke for different parts of the country. The Republican Party nominated William H. Crawford, a former congressman from Georgia. However, Crawford’s poor health weakened him as a candidate.

The other three Republicans in the presidential race were favorite son candidates, meaning they received the backing of their home states rather than that of the national party. Two of these candidates—Andrew Jackson and Henry Clay—came from the West. Clay, of Kentucky, was Speaker of the House of Representatives. He fought for his program of internal improvements, high tariffs, and a stronger national bank.

General Andrew Jackson of Tennessee was not a Washington politician, but he was a hero of the War of 1812. Raised in poverty, he claimed to speak for the Americans who had been left out of politics.

John Quincy Adams of Massachusetts, son of former president John Adams, received support from merchants of the Northeast.

Striking a Bargain

In the election Jackson received the largest number of popular votes. However, no candidate received a majority, or more than half, of the electoral votes. Jackson won 99 electoral votes, which gave him a plurality, or largest single share. Under the terms of the Twelfth Amendment to the Constitution, when no candidate receives a majority of electoral votes, the House of Representatives selects the president.

While the House was preparing to vote on the next president, Henry Clay met with Adams. Clay agreed to use his influence as Speaker of the House to defeat Jackson. In return Clay may have hoped to gain the position of secretary of state.

With Clay’s help Adams was elected president in the House. Adams quickly named Clay as secretary of state, traditionally the stepping-stone to the presidency. Jackson’s followers accused the two men of making a “corrupt bargain” and stealing the election.

The Adams Presidency

In Washington, D.C., the “corrupt bargain” had cast a shadow over Adams’s presidency. Outside the capital Adams’s policies ran against popular opinion. Adams wanted a stronger navy and government funds for scientific expeditions. Adams also wanted the federal government to direct economic growth.

Such ideas horrified those who desired a more limited role for the federal government, and Congress turned down many of Adams’s proposals. This was especially true after the congressional elections of 1826, when enemies of Adams controlled both the House and Senate.

Reading Check Describing Why were Adams and Clay accused of making a “corrupt bargain”?

The Election of 1828

By the election of 1828, the party had divided into two separate parties: the Democratic-Republicans, who supported Jackson, and the National Republicans, who supported Adams. Jackson’s Democratic-Republics, or Democrats, favored states’ rights and mistrusted strong central government. Many Democrats were individualists from the frontier, immigrants, or laborers in the big cities.

The National Republicans wanted a strong central government. They supported federal measures, such as road building and the Bank of the United States, that would shape the nation’s economy. Many were merchants or farmers.

During the campaign both parties resorted to mudslinging, attempts to ruin their opponent’s reputation with insults. The Democratic-Republicans accused Adams of betraying the people. They put out a handbill calling the election a contest “between an honest patriotism, on the one side, and an unholy, selfish ambition, on the other.”

The National Republicans fought back. They created a vicious campaign song to play up embarrassing incidents in Jackson’s life. One involved Jackson’s order in the War of 1812 to execute several soldiers who had deserted.

Mudslinging was not the only new element introduced in the 1828 campaign. Election slogans, rallies, buttons, and events such as barbecues were also used to arouse enthusiasm. All of these new features became a permanent part of American political life.

Jackson Triumphs

In the election of 1828, Jackson received most of the votes cast by voters of the new frontier states. He also received many votes in the South, where his support for states’ rights was popular. John C. Calhoun of South Carolina, who had served as Adams’s vice president, switched parties to run with Jackson. Calhoun also championed states’ rights. Jackson won the election in a landslide, an overwhelming victory, with 56 percent of the popular vote and 178 electoral votes.

“Old Hickory”

Like many of his supporters, Andrew Jackson had been born in a log cabin. His parents, poor farmers, died before he was 15. As a teenager Jackson fought with the Patriots in the American Revolution. Before he was 30, he was elected to Congress from Tennessee.

Jackson gained fame during the War of 1812. He defeated the Creek Nation in the Battle of Horseshoe Bend and defeated the British at the Battle of New Orleans. His troops called him “Old Hickory” because he was as tough as a hickory stick.

Small farmers, craft workers, and others who felt left out of the expanding American economy loved Jackson. They felt that his rise from a log cabin to the White House demonstrated the American success story. His popularity with the common man changed politics in Washington, D.C.

Citizenship

New Voters

President Andrew Jackson promised “equal protection and equal benefits” for all Americans—at least for all white American men. During his first term, a spirit of equality spread through American politics.

In the nation’s early years, most states had limited suffrage, or the right to vote, for men who owned property or paid taxes. By 1815 many states had loosened or soon would loosen the property requirements for voting. In the 1820s democracy expanded as people who had not been allowed to vote voted for the first time. Between 1824 and 1828, the percentage of white males voting in presidential elections increased from 26.9 to 57.6 percent. For the first time, white male sharecroppers, factory workers, and many others were brought into the political process.
The expansion of suffrage continued, and in 1840 more than 80 percent of white males voted in the presidential election. However, women still could not vote, and African Americans and Native Americans had few rights of any kind.

Another development in the broadening of democracy involved presidential electors. By 1828, 22 of the 24 states changed their constitutions to allow the people, rather than the state legislatures, to choose presidential electors.

The Spoils System

Democrats carried the spirit of democracy into government. They wanted to open up government jobs to people from all walks of life. They were disturbed that the federal government had become a bureaucracy, a system in which nonelected officials carry out laws. Democrats argued that ordinary citizens could handle any government job.

President Jackson fired many federal workers and replaced them with his supporters. The discharged employees protested vehemently. They charged that Jackson was acting like a tyrant, hiring and firing people at will. Jackson responded that a new set of federal employees would be good for democracy.

One Jackson supporter explained it another way: “To the victors belong the spoils.” In other words, because the Jacksonians had won the election, they had the right to the spoils—benefits of victory—such as handing out government jobs to supporters. The practice of replacing government employees with the winning candidate’s supporters became known as the spoils system.

Electoral Changes

Jackson’s supporters worked to make the political system more democratic as well. They abandoned the unpopular caucus system. In this system major political candidates were chosen by committees made up of members of Congress. The caucuses were replaced by nominating conventions in which delegates from the states selected the party’s presidential candidate.

The Democrats held their first national party convention in 1832 in Baltimore, Maryland. The convention drew delegates from each state in the Union. The delegates decided to nominate the candidate who could gather two-thirds of the vote, and Jackson won the nomination. This system allowed many people to participate in the selection of political candidates.

Analyzing Political Cartoons

A Political Card Game: Andrew Jackson plays a card game with his political enemies. Why did Jackson’s opponents criticize the spoils system?

Reading Check Describing What is a caucus system?
The Tariff Debate

Americans from different parts of the country disagreed strongly on some issues. One such issue was the tariff, a fee paid by merchants who imported goods. While president, Jackson faced a tariff crisis that tested the national government’s powers.

In 1828 Congress passed a very high tariff on manufactured goods from Europe. Manufacturers in the United States—mostly in the Northeast—welcomed the tariff. Because tariffs made European goods more expensive, American consumers were more likely to buy American-made goods.

Southerners, however, hated the new tariff. They called it the Tariff of Abominations—something hateful. These critics argued that, while tariffs forced consumers to buy American goods, tariffs also meant higher prices.

The South Protests

Southern politicians and plantation owners were ready to act. Vice President John C. Calhoun argued that a state or group of states had the right to nullify, or cancel, a federal law it considered against state interests. Some Southerners called for the Southern states to secede, or break away, from the United States and form their own government. When Calhoun explored this idea, troubling questions arose. The United States had been a nation for nearly 50 years. What if a state disagreed with the federal government? Did a state have the right to go its own way?

Calhoun drew from the ideas that Madison and Jefferson wrote in the Virginia and Kentucky Resolutions of 1798–1799. Calhoun argued that since the federal government was a creation of the states, the states themselves are the final authority of the constitutionality of federal laws. The alternative to state sovereignty, Calhoun pointed out, is to allow the Supreme Court or Congress to tell the people what our Constitution means and what orders we must obey.

The Webster–Hayne Debate

In January 1830, Senator Daniel Webster delivered a stinging attack on nullification. Webster stood on the floor of the Senate to challenge a speech given by Robert Hayne, a young senator from South Carolina. Hayne had defended the idea that the states had a right to nullify acts of the federal government, and even to secede.

In his response, Webster defended the Constitution and the Union. He argued that nullification could only mean the end of the Union. Webster closed with the ringing statement, “Liberty and Union, now and forever, one and inseparable!”

Jackson Takes a Stand

Nobody knew exactly where President Jackson stood on the issue of nullification. Many Southerners hoped that Jackson might side with them. In April 1830 supporters of states’ rights invited the president to speak at a dinner. The guests, including Calhoun, waited anxiously for Jackson to speak. Finally, the president rose to his feet and spoke directly to Calhoun.

“Our federal union . . . must be preserved!”

The states’ rights supporters were shocked and disappointed, but Calhoun answered the president’s challenge. He raised his glass and said,

“The Union—next to our liberty, most dear.”

He meant that the fate of the Union must take second place to a state’s liberty to overrule the Constitution if its interests were threatened.

Calhoun realized that Jackson would not change his views. Wishing to return to Congress to speak for Southern interests, Calhoun won election to the Senate in December 1832. Not long after, he resigned the vice presidency.

The Nullification Crisis

Southern anger over the tariff continued to build. The Union seemed on the verge of splitting apart. In 1832 Congress passed a new, lower tariff, hoping that the protest in the South would die down. It did not.

South Carolina, Calhoun’s home state, had led the fight against the so-called Tariff of Abominations. Now South Carolina took the battle one step further. The state legislature passed the Nullification Act, declaring that it would not pay the “illegal” tariffs of 1828 and 1832. The South Carolina legislators threatened to secede from the Union if the federal government tried to interfere with their actions.

To ease the crisis, Jackson supported a compromise bill proposed by Henry Clay that would gradually lower the tariff over several years. At the same time, Jackson made sure that the South would accept Clay’s compromise. Early in 1833 he persuaded Congress to pass the Force Bill, which allowed the president to use the United States military to enforce acts of Congress.

In response, South Carolina accepted the new tariff. However, to show that they had not been defeated, state leaders voted to nullify the Force Act. Calhoun and his followers claimed a victory for nullification, which had, they insisted, forced the revision of the tariff. For the time being, the crisis between a state and the federal government was over. Yet South Carolina and the rest of the South would remember the lesson of the nullification crisis—that the federal government would not allow a state to go its own way without a fight.

Reading Check

Summarizing Why did South Carolina pass the Nullification Act?
Analyzing Primary Sources

Why Learn This Skill?

Historians determine what happened in the past by combing through bits of evidence to reconstruct events. This evidence—both written and illustrated—is called primary sources. Examining primary sources can help you understand history.

Learning the Skill

Primary sources are records of events made by the people who witnessed them. They include letters, diaries, photographs and pictures, news articles, and legal documents. To analyze primary sources, follow these steps:

• Identify when and where the document was written.
• Read the document for its content and try to answer the five “W” questions: Who is it about? What is it about? When did it happen? Where did it happen? Why did it happen?
• Identify the author’s opinions.

Practicing the Skill

The primary source that follows comes from Speckled Snake, an elder of the Creek Nation, in 1829. He was more than 100 years old at the time he said these words. Read the quote, then answer the questions that follow.

“Brothers! I have listened to many talks from our Great Father. When he first came over the wide waters, he was but a little man. . . . But when the white man had warmed himself before the Indians’ fire and filled himself with their hominy, he became very large. With a step he bestrode the mountains and his feet covered the plains and the valleys. His hand grasped the eastern and the western sea, and his head rested on the moon. Then he became our Great Father. Brothers, I have listened to a great many talks from our Great Father. But they always began and ended in this—‘Get a little further; you are too near me.’”

1. What events are described?
2. Who was affected by these events?
3. What is the general feeling of the person who stated this opinion?

Applying the Skill

Analyzing Primary Sources Find a primary source from your past—a photograph, a report card, an old newspaper clipping, or your first baseball card. Bring this source to class and explain what it shows about that time in your life.

Glencoe’s Skillbuilder Interactive Workbook CD-ROM, Level 1, provides instruction and practice in key social studies skills.
Main Idea
As more white settlers moved into the Southeast, conflict arose between the Native Americans who lived there and the United States government.

Key Terms
relocate, guerrilla tactics

Reading Strategy
As you read Section 2, create a chart like the one below that describes what happened to each group of Native Americans as the United States expanded.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Year</th>
<th>Event</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1830</td>
<td>Congress passes the Indian Removal Act</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1832</td>
<td>Black Hawk leads Sauk and Fox people to Illinois</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1835</td>
<td>Seminole refuse to leave Florida</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1838</td>
<td>Cherokee driven from their homelands on the Trail of Tears</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

AN American Story
The Cherokee held their land long before European settlers arrived. Through treaties with the United States government, the Cherokee became a sovereign nation within Georgia. By the early 1800s the Cherokee had their own schools, their own newspaper, and their own written constitution. Sequoya’s invention of a Cherokee alphabet enabled many of the Cherokee to read and write in their own language. The Cherokee farmed some of Georgia’s richest land, and in 1829 gold was discovered there. Settlers, miners, and land speculators began trespassing on Cherokee territory in pursuit of riches.

Moving Native Americans
While the United States had expanded westward by the 1830s, large numbers of Native Americans still lived in the eastern part of the country. In Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, and Florida lived the “Five Civilized Tribes”—the Cherokee, Creek, Seminole, Chickasaw, and Choctaw. The tribes had established farming societies with successful economies.
Because the area west of the Mississippi was dry and seemed unsuitable for farming, few white Americans lived there. Many settlers wanted the federal government to relocate Native Americans living in the Southeast. They proposed to force the Native Americans to leave their land and move west of the Mississippi River. President Andrew Jackson, a man of the frontier himself, supported the settlers’ demand for Native American land.

Indian Removal Act

Congress responded by passing the Indian Removal Act in 1830. The act allowed the federal government to pay Native Americans to move west. Jackson then sent officials to negotiate treaties with Native Americans of the Southeast. Most felt compelled to accept payment for their lands. In 1834 Congress created the Indian Territory, an area in present-day Oklahoma, for Native Americans from the Southeast.
The Cherokee Nation

The Cherokee Nation, however, refused to give up its land. In treaties of the 1790s, the federal government had recognized the Cherokee people in the state of Georgia as a separate nation with their own laws. Georgia, however, refused to recognize Cherokee laws.

The Cherokee sued the state government and eventually took their case to the Supreme Court. In Worcester v. Georgia (1832), Chief Justice John Marshall ruled that Georgia had no right to interfere with the Cherokee. Only the federal government had authority over matters involving the Cherokee. (See page 627 of the Appendix for a summary of Worcester v. Georgia.)

President Jackson had supported Georgia’s efforts to remove the Cherokee. He vowed to ignore the Supreme Court’s ruling. “John Marshall has made his decision,” Jackson reportedly said. “Now let him enforce it.”

The Trail of Tears

In 1835 the federal government persuaded a few Cherokee to sign a treaty giving up their people’s land. Yet most of the 17,000 Cherokee refused to honor the treaty. They wrote a protest letter to the government and people of the United States.

> “We are aware that some persons suppose it will be for our advantage to [re]move beyond the Mississippi. . . . Our people universally think otherwise. . . . We wish to remain on the land of our fathers.”

The Cherokee plea for understanding did not soften the resolve of President Jackson or the white settlers of the area. In 1838 General Winfield Scott and an army of 7,000 federal troops came to remove the Cherokee from their homes and lead them west.

Scott threatened to use force if the Cherokee did not leave. He told them he had positioned troops all around the country so that resistance and escape were both hopeless. “Chiefs, head men, and warriors—Will you then, by resistance, compel us to resort to arms?” The Cherokee knew that fighting would only lead to their destruction. Filled with sadness and anger, their leaders gave in, and the long march to the West began. One man in Kentucky wrote of seeing hundreds of Cherokee marching by:
Osceola was born in 1804. His ancestors were Creek, African American, British, Irish, and Scottish. After President Jackson signed the Indian Removal Act in 1830, Osceola became the leader of the Seminoles and led successful attacks on United States forts. Hiding in the swampy lands of the Everglades, the Seminoles grew tired, sick, and hungry. Osceola attempted to surrender but was captured. He and his family were imprisoned at Fort Moultrie, South Carolina, where he died of a throat infection in 1838. Although he had waged a war against the United States, the public considered Osceola an honorable hero and a victim of trickery, and he was given a funeral with full military honors.

“Even [the] aged . . . nearly ready to drop in the grave, were traveling with heavy burdens attached to their backs, sometimes on frozen ground and sometimes on muddy streets, with no covering for their feet.”

Brutal weather along the way claimed thousands of Cherokee lives. Their forced journey west became known to the Cherokee people as the Trail Where They Cried. Historians call it the Trail of Tears.

Reading Check Explaining What was the purpose of the Indian Removal Act?

Native American Resistance

In 1832 the Sauk chieftain, Black Hawk, led a force of Sauk and Fox people back to Illinois, their homeland. They wanted to recapture this area, which had been given up in a treaty. The Illinois state militia and federal troops responded with force, gathering nearly 4,500 soldiers. They chased the Fox and Sauk to the Mississippi River and slaughtered most of the Native Americans as they tried to flee westward into present-day Iowa.

The Seminole people of Florida were the only Native Americans who successfully resisted their removal. Although they were pressured in the early 1830s to sign treaties giving up their land, the Seminole chief, Osceola, and some of his people refused to leave Florida. The Seminole decided to go to war against the United States instead.

In 1835 the Seminole joined forces with a group of African Americans who had run away to escape slavery. Together they attacked white settlements along the Florida coast. They used guerrilla tactics, making surprise attacks and then retreating back into the forests and swamps. In December 1835, Seminole ambushed soldiers under the command of Major Francis Dade. Only a few of the 110 soldiers survived the attack. The Dade Massacre pressured the call for more troops and equipment to fight the Seminole.

By 1842 more than 1,500 American soldiers had died in the Seminole wars. The government gave up and allowed some of the Seminole to remain in Florida. Many Seminole, however, had died in the long war, and many more were captured and forced to move westward. After 1842 only a few scattered groups of Native Americans lived east of the Mississippi. Most had been removed to the West. Native Americans had given up more than 100 million acres of eastern land to the federal government. They had received in return about $68 million and 32 million acres in lands west of the Mississippi River. There they lived, divided by tribes, in reservations. Eventually, these reservations, too, would face intrusion from white civilization.

The area of present-day Oklahoma became part of the United States in 1803 with the Louisiana Purchase. The United States set aside this area as the home for various Native American groups.

The Five Civilized Tribes were relocated in the eastern half of present-day Oklahoma on lands claimed by several Plains groups, including the Osage, Comanche, and Kiowa. United States Army leaders got agreements from the Plains groups to let the Five Civilized Tribes live in peace. Settled in their new homes, the Five Tribes developed their governments, improved their farms, and built schools. The Five Tribes also developed a police force called the Lighthorsemen. This law enforcement unit maintained safety for the region.

Comparing

How was the response of the Seminoles different from that of the Cherokee when they were removed from their lands?

Checking for Understanding

1. Key Terms Use the terms relocate and guerrilla tactics in complete sentences that will explain their meanings.
2. Analyzing Analyze how President Jackson reacted to the Supreme Court decision supporting the Cherokees’ rights.
3. Groups and Institutions How were the Seminole able to resist relocation?

Critical Thinking

4. Drawing Conclusions How was Georgia’s policy toward the Cherokee different from the previous federal policy?
5. Organizing Information Re-create the diagram below to show how the Cherokee were eventually removed from their land.

Analyzing Visuals

6. Geography Skills Study the maps on page 342. Which groups of Native Americans were located in Alabama? What does the inset map show? In what area of Florida was the Seminole reservation?

Persuasive Writing Write a letter to Andrew Jackson telling him why the Native Americans should or should not be allowed to stay in their homelands.
John Ross (left), the principal chief of the Cherokee, opposed the removal of his people. Rebecca Neugin (right) was one of the Cherokee forced to march west to Oklahoma. In this 1931 photograph, Neugin is 96 years old.

The Cherokee supplemented their meager diet with ground acorns and other foods they found along the route.
CHAPTER 11 The Jackson Era

1. To what present-day state were the Five Civilized Tribes forced to move?

2. Through what cities did the Cherokee travel during the removal that began on June 6, 1838?

LEARNING FROM GEOGRAPHY

TRAIL OF TEARS

LONG BEFORE EUROPEAN EXPLORERS ARRIVED, the Cherokee, Chickasaw, Choctaw, Creek, and Seminole were living in eastern North America. The Native Americans built permanent communities, practiced agriculture, and developed complex tribal governments—thereby earning the name of Five Civilized Tribes.

REMOVAL

As white settlers moved into the southeastern states, they began demanding the land held by Native Americans. In 1830, Congress passed the Indian Removal Act to move the Five Civilized Tribes west of the Mississippi. Under pressure, the Choctaw, Chickasaw, and Creek moved west while the Cherokee and the Seminole resisted.

RESISTANCE

Despite protests from the Cherokee people, they were forced to march west. In 1838, 13 ragged groups trekked to Fort Gibson in the newly created Indian Territory (see maps). Along the journey, which became known as the “Trail of Tears,” 4,000 Cherokee died of cold, hunger, or disease.

Some of the Seminole refused to abandon their homeland and waged a guerrilla war in the Florida Everglades until the government gave up its efforts to resettle them in 1842.

Forced Migration, 1830–1840

- Choctaw
- Creek
- Chickasaw
- Cherokee
- Seminole

Number of people

0 5,000 10,000 15,000 20,000

Most Cherokee farmers lived in log cabins.
Main Idea
Economic issues affected the presidencies of Andrew Jackson and Martin Van Buren.

Key Terms
veto, depression, laissez-faire, log cabin campaign

Reading Strategy
Sequencing Information  As you read the section, re-create the diagram below. In the spaces provided, describe the steps Andrew Jackson took that put the Bank of the United States out of business.

Read to Learn
• why Jackson wanted to destroy the Bank of the United States.
• how the Whigs came to power in 1840.

Section Theme
Economic Factors  Economic issues influenced politics in the mid-1800s.

Preview of Events
1830
1832
Andrew Jackson challenges the Bank of the United States

1835
1836
Martin Van Buren is elected president

1837
Panic of 1837 strikes the nation

1840
1841
Vice President John Tyler becomes president

AN American Story
President Andrew Jackson made many enemies. His most outspoken rivals, the Whigs, were strong in Congress. They accused “King Andrew” of increasing his power and spreading corruption with the spoils system. In response, Jackson declared that the president was responsible for the protection of “the liberties and rights of the people and the integrity of the Constitution against the Senate, or the House of Representatives, or both together.”

War Against the Bank
Jackson had another great battle during his presidency. For years, he had attacked the Bank of the United States as being an organization of wealthy Easterners over which ordinary citizens had no control. The Bank of the United States was a powerful institution. It held the federal government’s money and controlled much of the country’s money supply. Although the Bank had been chartered by Congress, it was run by private bankers rather than elected officials.
The Bank’s president, Nicholas Biddle, represented everything Jackson disliked. Jackson prided himself on being a self-made man who started with nothing. Biddle, on the other hand, came from a wealthy family and had a good education and social standing.

In 1832 Jackson’s opponents gave him the chance to take action against the Bank. Senators Henry Clay and Daniel Webster, friends of Biddle, planned to use the Bank to defeat Jackson in the 1832 presidential election. They persuaded Biddle to apply early for a new charter—a government permit to operate the Bank—even though the Bank’s current charter did not expire until 1836.

Clay and Webster believed the Bank had popular support. They thought that an attempt by Jackson to veto its charter would lead to his defeat and allow Henry Clay to be elected president.

When the bill to renew the Bank’s charter came to Jackson for signature, he was sick in bed. Jackson told his friend Martin Van Buren, “The bank, Mr. Van Buren, is trying to kill me. But I will kill it!” Jackson vetoed, or rejected, the bill.

Jackson, like many others, still felt the Bank was unconstitutional despite the Supreme Court’s decision to the contrary in McCulloch v. Maryland (1819). In a message to Congress, Jackson angrily denounced the Bank, arguing that

> “... when laws ... make the rich richer and the potent more powerful, the humble members of society—the farmers, mechanics, and laborers—who have neither the time nor the means of securing like favors to themselves, have a right to complain of the injustice of their Government.”

The Election of 1832

Webster and Clay were right about one thing. The Bank of the United States did play a large part in the campaign of 1832. Their strategy for Shortly after Van Buren’s election, the country entered a severe economic depression, a period in which business and employment fell to a very low level. The depression began with the Panic of 1837, a time when land values dropped sharply, investments declined suddenly, and banks failed. Thousands of businesses closed and hundreds of thousands of people lost their jobs. In the South, cotton prices fell to record lows. Farmers plunged into debt and lost their land. In the cities, many people could not afford food or rent. In February 1837, people in New York put up signs voicing their anger:

“Bread, Meat, Rent, and Fuel!
Their prices must come down!
The Voice of the People shall be heard and will prevail!”

President Van Buren believed in the principle of laissez-faire—that government should interfere as little as possible in the nation’s economy. Van Buren did persuade Congress to establish an independent federal treasury in 1840. The government would no longer deposit its money with private individual banks as it had started to do during President Jackson’s war with the Bank of the United States. Instead the government would store its money in the federal treasury. The private banks had used government funds to back their banknotes. The new treasury system would prevent banks from using government funds in this way and so help guard against further bank crises.

Van Buren and his supporters hailed the new law as a “second declaration of independence.” However, criticism of the act came from members... of Van Buren’s own Democratic Party as well as from Whigs. The split in the Democratic Party meant the Whigs had a chance to win the presidency in 1840.

Reading Check  Explaining  What was the new treasury system supposed to prevent?

The Whigs Come to Power

The Democrats had controlled the presidency for 12 years. However, with the country still in the depths of depression, the Whigs thought they had a chance to win the election in 1840. They nominated William Henry Harrison, a hero of the War of 1812, to run against President Van Buren. John Tyler, a planter from Virginia, was Harrison’s running mate. Because Harrison had gained national fame defeating Tecumseh’s followers in the Battle of Tippecanoe, the Whigs’ campaign slogan was “Tippecanoe and Tyler Too.”

To win the election, Harrison had to gain the support of the laborers and farmers who had voted for Jackson. The Whigs adopted a log cabin as their symbol. Political cartoons in newspapers showed Harrison, a wealthy man from Virginia, in front of a log cabin. The Whigs wanted to show that their candidate was a “man of the people.”

The Whigs also ridiculed Van Buren as “King Martin,” a wealthy snob who had spent the people’s money on fancy furniture for the White House. The log cabin campaign seemed to work, and Harrison went on to defeat Van Buren by a wide margin.

William Henry Harrison was inaugurated in 1841 as the first Whig president. The Whigs were still celebrating their victory when Harrison died of pneumonia on April 4, 1841. John Tyler of Virginia became the first vice president to gain the presidency because the elected president died in office.

Although Tyler had been elected vice president as a Whig, he had once been a Democrat. As president, Tyler, a strong supporter of states’ rights, vetoed several bills sponsored by Whigs in Congress, including a bill to recharter the Bank of the United States. His lack of party loyalty outraged Whigs. Most of Tyler’s cabinet resigned, and Whig leaders in Congress expelled Tyler from the party.

It seemed that the Whigs could not agree on their party’s goals. Increasingly, Whigs voted according to sectional ties—North, South, and West—not party ties. This division may explain why the Whig candidate, Henry Clay, lost the election of 1844 to Democratic candidate James Polk. After only four years, the Whigs were out of power again.

Reading Check  Describing  How did John Tyler become president?

---

SECTION 3 ASSESSMENT

Checking for Understanding

1. Key Terms  Use each of these terms in a complete sentence that will help explain its meaning: veto, depression, laissez-faire, log cabin campaign.

2. Reviewing Facts  List Jackson’s reasons for wanting to “kill” the Bank of the United States.

3. Economic Factors  Why did President Van Buren do little to solve the nation’s economic problems during the depression?

Critical Thinking

4. Analyzing Information  What tactics did the Whigs borrow from Jackson’s campaign to win the election of 1840?

5. Organizing Information  Re-create the diagram below to show how the Panic of 1837 affected the presidency of Martin Van Buren.

Analyzing Visuals

6. Analyzing Political Cartoons  Study the cartoon on page 349. Do you think the Bank of the United States is portrayed positively or negatively? Explain your answer.

Art  Write a campaign slogan for Van Buren or Harrison in the election of 1840. Then design a campaign button that incorporates your slogan.
Reviewing Key Terms

On graph paper, create a word search puzzle using the following terms. Crisscross the terms vertically and horizontally. Then fill in the remaining squares with extra letters. List the definitions below the puzzle as clues. Share your puzzle with a classmate.

1. plurality
2. landslide
3. suffrage
4. majority
5. nullify
6. secede
7. depression

Reviewing Key Facts

8. How did the supporters of Jackson and Adams differ in their beliefs?
9. What were some of the political tactics used by Democratic-Republicans and the National Republicans in the election of 1828?
10. Which Americans were prohibited from voting in most states before the 1800s?
11. How did nominating conventions make the selection of political candidates more democratic?
12. Why was the South against high tariffs?
13. Who did the Seminoles join forces with as they fought against forced removal from their land?
14. How did the Panic of 1837 affect the nation’s economy?
15. Why was Harrison’s log cabin campaign successful?

Critical Thinking

16. Drawing Conclusions President Andrew Jackson promised “equal protection and equal benefits” for all Americans. Do you think he included Native Americans in his promise? Why or why not?

17. Analyzing Themes: Groups and Institutions What agreement did the Cherokee Nation make with the federal government that Georgia refused to recognize?

18. Organizing Information Re-create the chart below. List the issues that Jackson dealt with during his presidency. Then describe how he responded to each issue.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Issues</th>
<th>Jackson’s response</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Geography and History Activity

The issue of states’ rights was debated in the election of 1828. Study the map below and answer the questions that follow.

Election of 1828

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>State</th>
<th>Total Electoral Votes</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Jackson</td>
<td>Democrat</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Adams</td>
<td>Republican</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

19. Region Which general areas of the United States voted for Andrew Jackson in the election of 1828?

20. Location Which candidate won more votes in Adams’s home state of Massachusetts?

21. Place Which three states divided their total electoral count between the two candidates?

Practicing Skills

Analyzing Primary Sources In an annual message to Congress in 1835, President Andrew Jackson spoke the words below. Read the excerpt and answer the questions that follow.

“All preceding experiments for the improvement of the Indians have failed. It seems now to be an established fact that they cannot live in contact with a civilized community and prosper. . . . A country west of Missouri and Arkansas has been assigned to them, into which the white settlements are not to be pushed.”

22. Whose opinion is stated in the excerpt?

23. What is the speaker’s attitude toward Native Americans?

24. According to the speaker, why should Native Americans be assigned to a country west of Missouri and Arkansas?

Citizenship Cooperative Activity

25. Becoming an Informed Voter With a partner, choose an election in your community. Outline how you would become informed on the candidates and/or the issues. Then follow your outline and become an informed voter. Share your outline and your findings with the class.

Economics Activity

26. Look in a dictionary to find definitions of “recession” and “depression.” Write a paragraph to explain the difference between the two.

Standardized Test Practice

Directions: Choose the best answer to the following question.

Which of the following statements expresses an opinion about Andrew Jackson?

- A Jackson served two terms as president.
- B He spoke out against South Carolina’s Nullification Act.
- C Because of Jackson, the United States has the best system of filling government positions.
- D Jackson supported the Indian Removal Act.

Test-Taking Tip

An opinion is a person’s belief. It is not a proven fact (such as answer A). Opinions often contain subjective words, like easier or best.